

Swim Whisperers™

Is your child having a difficult time learning to swim through traditional methods?

For some children, water can be scary or just uncomfortable. Others can never seem to get enough of it, yet don't know how to safely and independently coordinate their bodies when they're in the pool. The unique obstacles encountered by children of all types learning to swim tend to fall under one or more of the following 14 key areas:

Safety concerns

Water properties as they relate to the sensory system

"I can't touch that!"

Making a child go under water successfully

"What did I say?"

"How do I control my body?"

"I'm not going on my back!"

Seeking sensory input

Petrified to let go of the side

Engagement and interaction

Reacts in an extreme manner when getting splashed

Excessive drinking of the pool water

Ritual and routine to increase comfort

Success with swim strokes

Let our specially trained instructors use therapeutic methods to overcome these obstacles -- in private or semi-private lessons -- and turn your child into a confident and independent swimmer.
